This astrological portrait of your child is intended to give you insight into her unique gifts and challenges. Much of a child's behavior which may puzzle or stymie her parents are quite normal, common "developmental stages" of childhood, and there are a number of fine books available on the subject which illuminate the predictable stages that children experience as they unfold. In addition to the universal patterns, each child is an individual with particular qualities, potentials, and needs, and an understanding of these can help you parent your child more wisely and effectively. Acceptance and appreciation for a child's basic nature, and an awareness of the places where there might be stress or difficulties for your child, can be important allies in your parenting.

You will find that the interpretation of your child's chart is written in simple language, uncluttered by astrological jargon. If a statement appears to contradict another statement, then she exhibits these opposite qualities at different times in her life. For example, a statement that she is highly sociable and gregarious and a statement that you prefer solitude seemingly contradict each other; this means that she vacillates, and needs both sociability and solitude at different times.

ASCENDANT

The RISING SIGN in the birthchart (also known as the Ascendant) shows how this child faces life, her basic attitude or stance toward the world, the way she comes across, and how she appears to others.

Sagittarius Rising:

An eager explorer, restless wanderer, high-spirited and energetic adventurer, this child is bound to keep you on the go. Even from a very young age, she is very curious and hates to be contained in any way. As a baby, she will need a great deal of motion (bouncing, going for outings in her stroller, being carried in a backpack), and later on when she is mobile herself, you may have a hard time keeping up with her. She needs plenty of space to dance, prance, gallop, cavort, and generally release her overflowing energy. She can be quite boisterous and wild in her play and she often has no sense of self-restraint or moderation. She is a bit of a daredevil, and if it has never been done before, she wants to do it. She can also be rather overwhelming to quieter, more cautious children, but on the other hand, her liveliness and good cheer tends to be contagious. She brings out the playfulness in other people.

There is an open, welcoming friendliness about her that others find quite appealing. She seems to expect good times, and she enjoys sharing them. She likes having many playmates, and while she may have a favorite, she does not like to be limited or held back by anyone. In fact, she balks at restrictions of any kind, and finding a balance between giving her free rein to express herself and setting reasonable limits, is likely to be an ongoing challenge for you. When you want her to do something, you must enlist her cooperation and appeal to her higher instincts and strong sense of fair play. Commands and heavy displays of authority will create much resentment and resistance in her, but if you treat her with respect, she will generally respond admirably.

Jennifer is unflinchingly truthful, also, and her blunt honesty can be both refreshing and appalling at times. She sees right through hypocrisy and pretenses and she is not shy about pointing them out. She will probably need some gentle schooling in the art of diplomacy and of protecting people's feelings. Her good humor and good will are obvious, however, and therefore many people do not take offense at what otherwise might be a real blow!

Asc. Trine Venus:

Jennifer's personal appeal, charm, and gracious manners usually make a highly favorable first impression on others, and many doors open for her simply because of her agreeable personality. She has a gift for making other people comfortable and at ease with her. She does not like to argue or create discord, preferring to overlook problems or differences that arise between herself and others. Affection and harmony are more important to her than winning or defeating someone else.

Asc. Trine Jupiter:

Jennifer is willing to help and put herself out for others, and her generosity, goodwill, and large-spiritedness make her very well-liked. She tends to think of herself as lucky and to splurge, overdo, or be a bit sloppy because she feels "everything will work out fine for me."

SUN

The SUN in the birthchart represents who this child is at heart, her primary thrust in life, and what path she needs to follow in order to fulfill herself as a unique individual. It indicates who she is inside rather than the way she appears (which is shown more clearly by the Rising Sign).

Sun in Leo:

Jennifer is very concerned with becoming a person of distinction and importance, and as a child this is likely to be expressed as a great need for special recognition, attention, praise, and applause. She relishes the limelight, loves to be made much of, and will positively glow with delight when she is the center of attention. Above all else she cannot tolerate being ignored or considered mediocre, "just one of the crowd." She possesses an inherent sense of dignity and pride, and she wants to be outstanding and special. She is also strong-willed, definitely a force to be reckoned with. Unless you want a small dictator on your hands, you will often have to be very firm with her. She is very stubborn and persistent when she wants something, and you will have to be equally so. But even though she is likely to strongly resist your rules or disciplinary actions at times, she will also secretly admire you for it if you are truly just and do not violate her sense of self-respect. Humiliate her and she will never forgive you. And she has a real horror of being embarrassed in front of others.

In a group of children, Jennifer is inclined to be at the hub of the action. She has the ability to organize, direct, and lead others, but as a child she can also be rather overbearing, and she tends to dominate less sturdy children. On the other hand she looks up to older children or adults that win her respect, and she is inclined to have heroes, shining examples, people she wants to emulate. She needs to have positive models to inspire her to be her best.

One of her most appealing qualities is her warm-heartedness. She is very generous and loyal in her affections, and if you love her, she will wholeheartedly adore you in return. She also has a very playful, exuberant, fun-loving side which is likely to last throughout her life.

Sun in 9th house:

Jennifer is naturally broadminded, philosophical, and interested in learning and in seeing as much of the world as possible. Faraway places and exotic cultures fascinate her, and when she grows up she may travel widely, be involved in cross-cultural exchanges, or have business interests in foreign lands. This child thinks big and dreams of the future--so much so that her immediate here-and-now world may be neglected. (Cleaning the bedroom or feeding the cat isn't nearly as interesting as fantasizing about leading an expedition to Mars.)

Sun Square Mars:

Jennifer will need to learn to harness and direct her aggressiveness and impatience. She finds it very trying to wait or take direction from others. A flaring temper, petty skirmishes and minor accidents due to her rashness and impetuosity will occur from time to time, especially if she has no place to release her pent-up energies. Athletics are a good arena for her.

Sun Sextile Moon:

Jennifer has an inner sense of harmony and emotional balance which enables her to face whatever obstacles she meets in life with assurance. She has the happy ability to accommodate others while still being true to herself.

MERCURY

MERCURY represents thinking and reasoning processes, the way your child's mind works, her intellectual inclinations and way of communicating ideas.

Mercury in Virgo:

Jennifer's mind is clear, critical, and precise, and she pays meticulous attention to details. She dissects each idea presented to her, picking it apart in order to study it. She is also skillful with her hands and may enjoy handicrafts, needlework, and the like.

Mercury in 10th house:

Education is extremely important to Jennifer, because she's ambitious and will be drawn to an intellectual career, one that involves presenting ideas and concepts. She may start planning her college curriculum in elementary school! Having an elder who takes a special interest in her education will make a significant impact on her life.

Mercury Trine Mars:

Sharp-witted and quick at repartee, Jennifer enjoys lively discussion, debates, or intellectual sparring. She excels at games that require both skill and intelligence. She is likely to be quarrelsome, especially when she is bored.

Mercury Trine Saturn:

Jennifer's ability to concentrate, to organize and structure her work, and to think in clear, specific, practical terms makes her a successful student and a productive worker. She has sound judgment and is impartial and unemotional when making decisions. She likes to learn practical or technical skills, not just intellectual or theoretical knowledge.

Moon Square Mercury:

Jennifer tends to think and talk about her feelings and personal experiences quite a lot, and she seems to need to verbalize and understand her emotions, not just feel them. Writing her feelings down in a journal, letter, poem, or story is a very good outlet for her.

MOON

The MOON in the birthchart indicates how she deals with and expresses feelings, how she experiences the world on an emotional, feeling, non-verbal level, what her emotional needs are, and what she needs to feel secure, comfortable and at ease.

Moon in Gemini:

One of the primary ways that Jennifer responds to the world is by thinking and talking about it, and if given any encouragement at all, she will discuss her feelings and experiences very readily. Creating a ritual of talking about the ups and downs of her day with her, just prior to going to sleep at night, can be very relaxing and soothing for her, putting her at ease. Even at a young age, before she can articulate, she is likely to be a chatterbox and to need quite a bit of social interaction and "conversation." She will love hearing rhymes, jingles, and little songs, and she will often respond with a stream of her own jabbering. Try not to tell her to "be quiet" too often as she is growing up, because speaking is a significant means of self expression for her.

Jennifer needs an interesting stimulating environment and she may become cranky and out of sorts when she exhausts all of the materials and playthings you provide for her. She will love books, story tapes, puzzles, and mentally challenging games, such as word games or computer games. Restless and easily bored, she is inclined to lose interest in an activity rather quickly. It may seem that she needs to be entertained constantly. She grasps concepts quickly and is always eager to see or experience something new. Outings to the library, to visit friends, or just anything to break up her routine will always be welcome. She adapts well to changes in her environment.

This child has an insatiable curiosity and desire to learn about the world. and she is unlikely to cling too tightly to your apron strings. The outside world is just too fascinating. She is also somewhat uncomfortable with emotions, sentimentality, and others' emotional needs or demands. When difficult feelings such as fear or sadness arise, she will often simply ignore them or try to make a joke. Sometimes she becomes silly in response to intense feelings or situations that she does not understand. Even at a surprisingly young age she can be detached and objective in emotionally-charged situations.

Moon in 7th house:

Jennifer truly depends on her friends to be there for her, and she, in turn, takes care of them and is fiercely loyal. She may feel lost and at loose ends when playmates are unavailable, and losing a friend (whether through relocating or through a falling out) is deeply distressing. She gets very attached to her companions and friends. One of her best and closest friends may be a sibling.

VENUS

VENUS represents the way your child gives and receives affection, makes friends, and socializes. It also indicates artistic or creative inclinations.

Venus in Leo:

Jennifer very much wants to be admired, petted, and made much of by her friends, and she is lavish in her affection for others as well. She can be greedy for attention, and she very much dislikes being ignored or seen as just one of the crowd. There is a streak of vanity in her. Positively, she is warm, demonstrative, loyal and generous with people she cares about.

Venus in 8th house:

Deep feelings of attachment and closeness, along with jealousy and other strong emotions, typify Jennifer's friendships. She may be possessive and demanding or have a close friend who acts that way toward her. She isn't breezy and casual about those she loves, and she won't give up easily on people. Even her pets are likely to be the objects of intense feelings and affections.

Venus Conjunct Jupiter:

Generous and open-hearted, Jennifer likes to help, inspire or cheer up her friends. She does not understand pettiness at all; when she gives a gift or entertains her friends, she likes to do so on a grand scale. Her taste for quality or luxury can sometimes degenerate into extravagance, wastefulness, and a lack of moderation.

MARS

MARS represents your child's drive, ambition, will, energy level, and ability to assert herself.

Mars in Taurus:

Jennifer has trouble getting started, and she may seem slow or sluggish at times, but once she gets going, she has excellent stamina and staying power. Her energy level is strong and even. She is likely to be extremely obstinate when you try to force her to do something against her will.

Mars in 6th house:

Jennifer is a "worker bee" who works hard at the tasks, chores, and plans she sets for herself. She likes to be organized because she feels she can get a lot done that way. She'll want to be gainfully employed at an early age, and she's not averse to working her way up from the bottom.

Mars Trine Saturn:

Jennifer is careful, cautious, thorough, and rather conservative in the way she uses her energy. She tries to minimize any risks or element of uncertainty before she acts, and she sometimes loses out by playing it safe. Her energy level is steady and consistent.

JUPITER

JUPITER in the birth chart reveals the child's future aspirations, and how she seeks to grow and improve herself. It also indicates areas of natural confidence, success, or "luck."

Jupiter in Cancer:

Family and continuity with the past are very important to Jennifer, and no matter what her aspirations, she will never willingly grow away from her people. She will want to learn as much as possible about her family tree, her origins and ancestors. Being a part of an ongoing tradition--part of a tribe, so to speak--gives her confidence and strength. Visiting the homes of distant relatives would delight her.

Even though she's devoted to her family, her emotional generosity and sympathies extend beyond her immediate circle. She wants everyone to be "family," and will gladly accept schoolmates, camp buddies, and friends as such. Her nurturing, protective feelings are strong and she's very caring toward other children (especially younger ones) and toward pets--indeed, toward anyone in need of support.

Jupiter in 8th house:

Jennifer is deeply curious about the mysteries of life and death, the afterlife, and the supernatural, as well as the inner workings of people. As a young child, she'll ask a lot of probing questions about "taboo" subjects like sex or death, not out of fear but merely because she's fascinated. She'll enjoy learning how various cultures view such things--how and why the Egyptians mummified their dead, for instance, or what the Hindus believe about reincarnation. And she'll surprise the adults in her circle with her precocious insights and wisdom about such matters. She understands, much more than one might expect, about why people behave as they do, and in her later life this will give her a great advantage in dealing with people and forming cooperative partnerships.

SATURN

The position of SATURN in your child's birth chart indicates the areas in which she is especially insecure, about which she is most serious, and/or in which she works hardest or is hardest on herself. It also reveals those weaknesses which, through effort, may become her greatest strengths.

Saturn in Capricorn:

Jennifer has a very definite and critical internal judge, and she'll struggle with trying to live up to her own high standards and expectations. As a youngster, she may seem more mature, conservative, controlled, and/or concerned with achievement than is typical for her age. Indeed, she may become overly conscientious, weighed down with her sense of responsibility. At times, she may seem like a little old woman.

Jennifer needs to be allowed, and even encouraged, to be a child, not burdened with many parental expectations or serious responsibilities. If the harsh realities of life are pointed out to her too often, she could easily be overwhelmed and grow fretful and joyless. She'll need to be reminded to lighten up once in a while. Parents, teachers, and other elders must beware of criticizing her efforts. Even excessive praise can be detrimental if she senses that she's constantly being assessed and "graded." Warm, unconditional acceptance and a forgiving sense of humor will help immensely.

Saturn in 2nd house:

Jennifer often worries that there won't always be enough of what she needs. Due to this fear of lack or deprivation, she may be unwilling to freely share her possessions. This child would rather save her allowance than waste it on frivolity or fluff. If she's feeling insecure in any way, she's apt to hoard things--material objects, money--and to become stingy.

MOON'S NODES

The Lunar Nodes are points formed by the moon's orbit around the Earth intersecting with the Earth's path around the Sun. These sensitive "power points" in our child's chart give vital information about those areas of life experience that she will instinctively be drawn to in order to fulfill her life purposes, as well as qualities she needs to develop and express in order to do so. They show where she can be most successful as she unfolds her natural talent

North Node in 2nd House in Aquarius:

Jennifer's life path has very much to do with learning how to satisfy her own basic needs for security, developing her own values, and appreciating the true worth of things. Learning how to manage money (even a small allowance), how to share what she has (and when not to), and experiencing the joy of pursuing what she truly values and loves simply for the pleasure of it (and letting rewards come as a natural result of that) are key lessons. It may be important not to force her to share or "co-own" her toys or other possessions before she feels ready to. She may cling to certain beloved things (a special piece of clothing, stuffed animals or blanket for instance) for quite a while before she's ready to go without it. She has a natural talent for the practical side of life and her destiny is to master the proper use of resources. Her basic question is what is worth cherishing and keeping and what can be given up or eliminated.

The qualities Jennifer needs in order to succeed in this endeavor are experimentation and the willingness to be different or perhaps unconventional.

GENERATIONAL INFLUENCES

The slow-moving planets Uranus, Neptune, and Pluto represent the ideals, changes, and impulses of an entire generation. While the descriptions below may or may not describe your child as an individual, they will tell you about the climate of the times and the underlying issues and challenges of your child's age group.

For instance, when Neptune (which represents one's spiritual ideals, dreams, aspirations, fantasies and illusions) passed through the egalitarian and harmony-loving sign of Libra (from 1943-1957), the children who would grow into the "flower children," hippies, and supporters of the peace movement were born. Not every person born during that time became a hippie or identified themselves with the peace movement, but certainly they were affected by the feeling-tone and ideals of their age group and the times they grew up in. Thus, the following information is intended to give you insight into the important motifs and issues of your child's generation.

URANUS indicates where the impulse for change, innovation, liberation from the past, and experimentation with new forms is the strongest. It is where the status quo is disrupted or uprooted to make way for something new. Sudden inspiration and invention are also represented by Uranus.

Uranus in Capricorn:

Making real and substantial changes in government, business practices, and other large social structures is the challenge of those in this age group (1988-1996). They are practical and pragmatic reformers rather than utopian idealists. They challenge authority not because they are against authority per se, but because they want to implement innovations and progressive ways of doing things.

Uranus in 2nd house:

Jennifer may feel disinterested or weighted down by material possession, money, or the conventional attitudes society teaches about the need to work diligently to provide for oneself.

Her values are unusual and somewhat offbeat. As a child this could mean she will toss away a special gift soon after she receives it, not because she doesn't appreciate the gift but because she prefers to go lightly. She may be irresponsible about her allowance or spend it on outlandish things. Ultimately, she's learning how to be free of material constraints, and will experiment with alternative ways to support herself when she grows up.

Uranus Conjunction Neptune:

Jennifer may have a really unusual imagination or fantasy life, and many spontaneous paranormal or psychic experiences as well. She is part of a group of children with highly sensitive bodies and psyches. Unusual creative gifts may blossom in these children if they are supported in a nurturing, peaceful environment. Radical shifts in awareness and perception will come into the world through these souls.

NEPTUNE represents the quest for the ideal, the dream, for something more sublime. The sign it is passing through at the time of one's birth colors one's spiritual aspirations and ideals, and also indicates where the desire to escape reality, to fantasize, deceive oneself, and become lost in illusion is the strongest.

Neptune in Capricorn:

Those of this age group (1984-1998) are rather conservative and perhaps skeptical in their attitude toward spirituality. A revival of interest in religious tradition, meaningful ritual, and contemplative practices occurs in this group, but they are not especially idealistic or aspiring and can easily become cynical toward religion that has no practical value or relevance. Otherworldly metaphysics are not for them.

Work and achievement could become their god.

Neptune in 2nd house:

Jennifer is not a very materialistic person at heart, and may be wholly impractical when it comes to money and/or taking care of her belongings. She can be generous to a fault and give away her things if she believes another person could use them. It would be wise to encourage balance, moderation, and responsibility in this area, while not squelching her compassionate impulses. How the world functions in practical terms is likely to be something of a mystery to her and it would be quite helpful if she is taught some of the basics while she is young.

Neptune Sextile Pluto:

Those born during this generation have the opportunity to advance spirituality and a consciousness of unity, universality, and brother/sisterhood. Only a few individuals may heed the call, but many will be influenced by them.

PLUTO in the birth chart indicates a process of deep change, transformation, and renewal, often through destruction or confrontation with darkness. This is a process that takes place in society as well as in individuals. Pluto's position in the birth chart shows where one is compulsive, extreme, or learning key life lessons.

Pluto in Scorpio:

Those born during this time period (1984- 1995) are driven to uncover, bring to light, and expose the secret, hidden aspects of situations which others fear and wish to avoid. They will investigate and delve into areas which have been considered taboo, unknown or unknowable. There is a great deal of emotional force, depth, and complexity in these children, and they are not easy to fathom. They may need help in understanding and accepting their own intense emotions.

There is a highly psychic and intuitive aspect to them, and they cannot be fooled by pretense or surface appearances, so it is best to bring things out in the open with them rather than try to conceal any struggle or difficulty that arises.

Pluto in 12th house:

Jennifer's obsessions tend to be quiet and hidden, as she is profoundly private, even secretive at times. She needs quite alot of space for deep introspection, and may be lonely at times, but she shouldn't be shamed for that or forced into sociability when she isn't interested. She may well be the one people confide in, take their troubles to, or trust with their vulnerabilities.
